Fireboat Dashes to Save Women Who Leap From Barges' Decks.

MERELY A MOVIE STUNT

Yesterday was a clear bright day, so Skinny the Rat set fire to the excursion barge Andrew M. Church, loaded with picnickers of a rival gang, in the Hudson River near Riverdale. The gangsters and their lady friends leaped into the water, there was a fight for life preservers and shreiks and cries for help name through the smoke—the thick, yellow, "smokepot" smoke of the movies. The Fox Film Corporation was staging "Regeneration," adapted from 'Owen Kildare's "My Mamie Rose,"

It was a realistic adaptation—so realof the smoke prevented frightened camp-errs and residents of Spuyten Duyvil, mindful of the Eastland and the General Slocum, from telephoning police head-quarters, that a steamer was burning in the river, with horrible loss of life. That the river, with norrible loss of life. That is why there came first a launch from the Kingsbridge station, then another from Harbor B, and finally the fireboat James Duane, from Thirty-fifth street, her ten men manning the big, shiny nezzles, ready for flerce work. Capt. Mustard was a bit testy when he found out it was the movies.

Ever since a week ago Friday the movie actors have waited for this big movie actors have waited for this big scene, but yesterday was the first good opportunity the weather has afforded for their purposes. They made the most of it and went through it all—some of it twice. There was the paniestricken fight for life pre-servers, for instance. That had to be done over because, said Director Raoui A. Welsh, "I want to see more men helping women, more life preservers in the air, more smoke and more excitement." He got them all.

Then came the scene that really set the campers by the ears, brought a flotika of canoes and motorboats to the rescue and also the police and firemen. Fairly belching thick smoke from all three decks, the barge swung apparently helpiess in midstream and from her leaped men, women and children until the water was dotted with their heads and her sides swarmed with them. From the upper deck rained burning bits of wood and waste—and above it all rang screams—and the shout of the director. "Don't laugh. Remember, this is serious; you're all dying and you're all

For just a minute it looked as if the movie stunt might end fatally. As hangers on the Fox Company had im ported for realism was seen to sink, and only quick work by Mrs. John E. Boldt, who hiked with Gen. Rosalie Jones, the suffrage leader, a few years ago, saved him. A minute later, fourteen-year-old Margaret Bernstedt was pulled out with exhaustion.

Then came some more strenuous scenes, with Rockcliff Fellowes rescuing two children amid the flames belching from blow pots, a mad crowd rushing up and down narrow stairs and into lifeboats terror stricken, for that yellow smoke is thick. Last of all Anna Nilsson had to be dragged away from a quiet poker game to rescue some more children. Anna is Mamie Rose in the film.

The new enterprise is to be modelled after the Continental music hall idea. There will be a dance club in the basement, a musical show in the auditorium and a midnight review on the roof, besides bars, tap rooms, tea rooms, private dining rooms and restaurant service.

Mr. Wayburn plans to open "Town Topics" in September, the roof garden show in October and the dance club in November. His "Town Topics" company will fill the big stage of the Century, which is much larger than any other now devoted to such productions. He says he has ninety-six girls in the He says he has ninety-six girls in the the says he has ninety-six girls in the chorus and twenty-four men, besides about thirty principals. # MILLS $1,000,000 GIFTS

Surrogate Decides There Was No Intent to Evade Transfer Law.

Surrogate Cohalan decided yesterday that the estate of Darius Ogden Mills. who died on January 3, 1910, need not pay a transfer tax on Christmas gifts of $1,000,000 each made by Mr. Mills to his daughter. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and to his son, Ogden Mills, just before he died, in accordance with his custom for many years. Counsel for the State Comptroller contended that the $2,000,000 should be taxed because the gifts were not actually delivered to the son and daughter until after the death of Mr. Mills.

death of Mr. Mills.

In his opinion exempting the gifts
Surrogate Cohalan says that on December 14, 1909, Mr. Mills, who was
In California, wrote to his son exgifts to his children and saying that each gift would take the form of a transfer of 8,000 shares of Atchison Railroad stock, the difference between the value of the stock and $1,000,000 to be made up in cash. The difference was

The Surrogate says that Mr. Mills did not receive his father's letter because he had started for California to see him, but the letter was opened by George W. Graff, the decedent's bookkeeper, who wrote the decedent that he had taken action as ordered in the to complete the gifts. The testimony showed that for years the stock had been kept in a safe deposit box to which Ogden Mills, who held broad powers of attorney from his father, had access.

Surrogate Cohalan concludes that while there was not an actual delivery of the gifts to the beneficiaries, this was not possible in the peculiar circumstance.
